Mr. Vazquez:

1. The hardcopy of my invoice is in the mail.
2. I have been told the agenda change occurred because of a specific politician. Please indicate exactly who, the answer to which is of obvious public interest. If you are unwilling to disclose that, please so indicate, and that is what I will say in the future.
3. As best I can tell, the problem started with a tweet, such as the one pasted below. That tweet led to a politician's anxiety, which led the politician to override the Florida Board of Medicine, behind closed doors, anonymously and without responsibility of outcome. Although I am perfectly happy to defend my de-stigmatization campaign, the important point is how Twitter has greater influence on Floridians than even its own medical board. That, of course, is of greatest public interest of all. Do please indicate if any of my conclusions is incorrect.

I have already shared the information I had during a podcast interview this week, and I have another coming up. I want to know whether I should be saying, "The Florida medical board won't say" or "The Florida medical board didn't respond." Both indicate the confidence Floridians should have in their state's process. This secrecy gives cause to both sides on this issue to question and challenge any decision the board ultimately makes.
